

I am totally against allowing cell phone use on airplanes. Even if you rule out navigational interference, I don't want to pay to sit next to some loudmouth cell phone user. It is very annoying and would probably cause security concerns due to someone becoming upset and starting a fight. I have no problem with using laptop computers on flights. When I travel for business, I like to rest or read business related material. You can't do that with someone talking on a phone in your ear. I use my cell phone every day. But I don't have one of those irritating ring tones and I don't talk on the phone in public places. I keep my phone on vibrate and when I receive a call, I go to a private place or outside. Unfortunately, most people don't see it that way. Please do not allow this to happen.
